Every iPad Pro they purchased had a sticker saying it was running iOS 11. An image of the sticker, shared by Twitter user @Electrify_C, is visible in the image above. The sticker included a date of May 19, the day before the first iOS 11.2 beta was released. A previous version of the update, which shipped on May 20, also included the sticker in the same way, and several users have pointed this out to Apple. Apple's support document for the iPad Pro line doesn't mention anything about an in-store update, but it does list a list of supported devices and applicable software versions for the device. The sticker doesn't seem to apply for the iPad Pro, which goes to show that there is no direct leak of any sort here. It's possible that a store employee could
